'Homeopathy can prevent, cure swine flu'

8th August 2009 - Amid panic over the spread of influenza A (H1N1) virus, homeopaths are now drafting a proposal for the health ministry to offer their services in tackling the crisis.

'Giving an example of the effectiveness of homeopathy in an epidemic in India, when Japanese encephalitis hit Andhra Pradesh 10 years ago, the government distributed one million doses of Belladonna, a homeopathic drug, to children. No child was affected by Japanese encephalitis after that. Therefore, homeopathy can provide an effective and inexpensive preventive measure and cure for swine flu too," Batra said.

GPs witness nearly 100% rise in patients

12th August 2009

Anxious citizens turn to homeopathy

Many nervous Mumbaikars are opting for natural remedies like homeopathy to boost their immunity in order to protect themselves from the H1N1 virus. Consulting homeopath and lifestyle expert Dr Shankar Chawla, who has been practicing in Chembur for the last 24 years, says that there has been a 'remarkable' surge in patients, while Dr John Rodrigues - consulting homeopath from the Centre for Scientific Homeopathy which has three clinics across the city - said that there has been a 70-80% increase in patients suffering from fever, common cold, etc.

Chawla said that homeopathy was based on the principle of improving immunity, and providing for the emotional and mental well-being of the patient.

History of Homeopathy in India

Homeopathy came to India in 1810 when some German physicians and missionaries came to Bengal. These missionaries started distributing homoeopathic remedies. Dr. John Martin Honigberger was the first person to have brought homeopathy and the name of Hahnemann to India
