Drug makers face new EU rules on medicines labeling information

December 10, 2008

It proposed that EU drugs makers be restricted in what they can say on packaging, leaflets and Web sites. They would be able to mention the price, the risks, verified data about the ailment the drug aims to relieve and the product's environmental impact.

The British consumer advocacy group Which! said it worries that better information would become advertising, predicting a US-style situation "where people demand specific branded drugs from the doctor when cheaper, equally effective drugs are available," it said.

The British Constitution Group Lawful Rebellion - Actions Not Words

The collective political establishment, consisting of the three main political parties, have agreed amongst themselves, without our consent, to transfer our national sovereignty to Brussels. This process commenced in 1972 with the signing of the Treaty of Rome and concludes when the Lisbon Treaty comes into force. As the process is now in its final phase, the loss of our national sovereignty is now certain, unless their plans are stopped. There are profound implications for every British citizen if we lose our national sovereignty.
